25TH May, 2018

It is my prayers that you receive this letter this time, as I had previously tried to send a letter to you from my district, hence the reason I have now sent a colleague coming to UK for a conference, to help me use the postal system for quick delivery to you, as it became inevitably urgent for me to make contact with you.

I am writing you with regards to Mr Stuart Cameron now deceased, a long-time customer of my bank, where I have worked for over 15 years. I have been able to contact you after I hired a private heir hunter to look for someone honest and with similar last name as late Stuart. After much search by the heir hunter; your details were found and forwarded to me, that is why I am contacting you with the proposal to make you the sole beneficiary to the estate of late Stuart worth USD$9,830,000 because he never left a Will or a dependant in his file.

I want you to respond to me by reconfirming your full details immediately you receive this letter via my Email above. Upon receipt of your information, I will proceed with all necessary documentations in your name to officially make you the Next-of-Kin and beneficiary to late Stuart, so that these funds could be made available to you confidentially without anyone knowing about it. Note that the process would take approximately two to three weeks to complete and the funds credited to your nominated bank account.

I know this might be a bit heavy for you but please trust me on this; for all your trouble I propose that we split money in half (50-50). In the banking circle here in Hong Kong and even more prevalent in Europe, this happens every time. If we do not claim these funds for ourselves, the only other option is that the money will revert back to the State and government officials will end up diverting it for themselves. Top CEO's of the banks at times sweep this under the carpet and convert them to juicy bonuses. You need to note that nobody is getting hurt and this is a lifetime opportunity for us as I hold the KEY to these funds and as an insider we see so much cash and funds being re-assigned daily.

I await your immediate response preferably via email, while trusting that we keep this to ourselves. Be rest assured that with my position, we are fully secure.

Regards,

Mr Martin Chueng
